CANOPIES

Before purchasing a new canopy, you need to consider where it will be located. If you select a ducted unit, the exhaust must be vented outside, never directed to the attic or basement. If your canopy is to be mounted on an exterior wall, the exhaust ducts will be shorter and therefore more efficient. If you plan to install the canopy on an interior wall or island, keep in mind the longer distance and consider a more powerful unit.

COOKTOPS

Be sure to measure the space that you have available for your cooktop. Know the height, width and depth of the area you want the new model to fit into before you purchase.
If selecting a gas cooktop you will need a gas hookup; not all homes have access to natural gas and in some cases bottled gas or LPG can be used.

Refrigerators are a long-term appliance investment so you'll want to carefully consider the main aspects of each model to ensure it meets your needs.

A helpful hint...

"The direction of a refrigerator door can influence the efficiency and convenience of your kitchen. Before choosing a model, consider the traffic flow-through, workspace and proximity to counters and cabinets. Ask your local appliance experts to ensure you get the best fit for your home."
